In-Home, Online Tutoring Service

Does your high school student need help in science or math?

Check out TutaPoint.com, which launched in October. The company's national tutors offer live, one-on-one instruction to high school students in math and science. Unlike other online tutoring companies, TutaPoint uses only qualified tutors based in the United States. The company has offices in Connecticut & New York.

"The site is a perfect opportunity for students to receive individual attention in their home, on their own time, from an experienced tutor," said Executive Director Beth Kelly, who is also a technology teacher for the Madison, Connecticut, public school system.

Tutapoint.com grants students immediate and pre-scheduled access to high-quality instructional professionals.

Students receive instruction in a state-of-the-art classroom that utilizes audio and video capabilities, a large electronic whiteboard and text chat in a private, individualized setting.

"It was so much better for me to be able to be sitting in a living room instead of going out to meet someone face-to-face," said a Connecticut high school student and a client of the company.

TutaPoint.com also offers an exclusively-designed curriculum. The curriculum enables students and tutors to work from a common set of problems and solutions. TutaPoint also has published two textbooks.

The company plans to expand subject offerings to include reading, writing, foreign languages, etc.
